

Bob Sahr was elected to the South Dakota Public Utilities Commission in November 2002, and was elected Chairman of the Commission in January 2003. Chairman Sahr serves on a national telecommunications committee and on a national task force focusing on protecting utilities from terrorism attacks. He travels the state putting on consumer protection seminars for senior citizens and other groups. Bob grew up in Pierre, SD where he has settled with his wife, Christine and daughter, Allison.

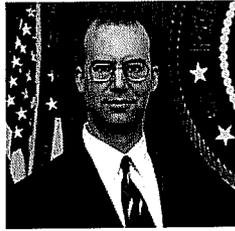

Gary Hanson was elected to the South Dakota Public Utilities Commission in November 2002. He currently serves as the Vice Chairman and represents South Dakota on the Organization of MISO States. Before joining the PUC, Gary served two terms as Utilities Commissioner in Sioux Falls, SD and then was elected to two terms as Mayor of Sioux Falls, South Dakota's largest city. Gary resides in Sioux Falls with his wife Sandy, and has three grown children.

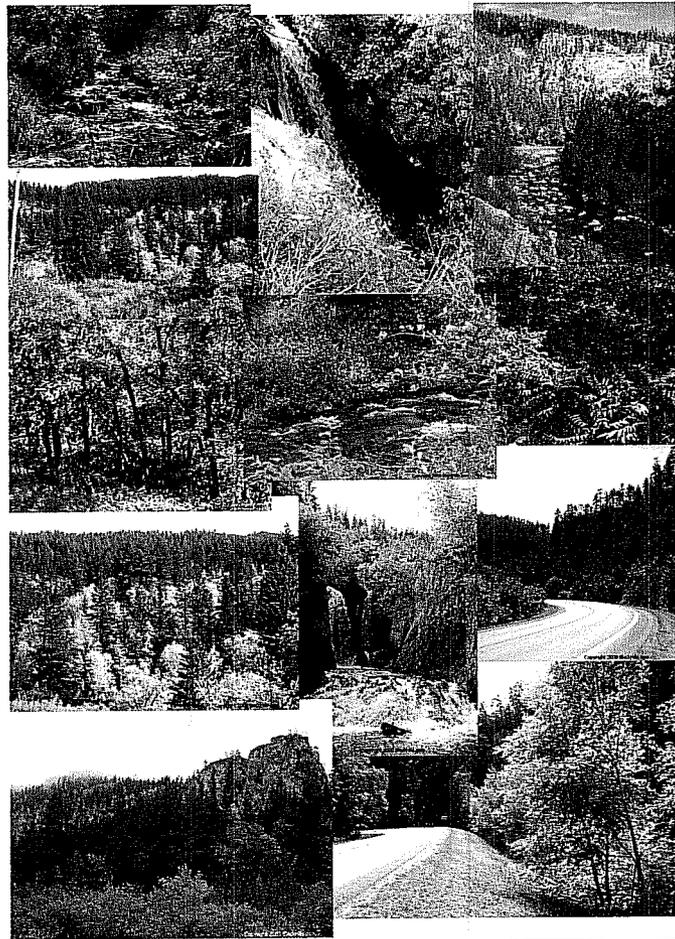

Jim Burg was first elected to the South Dakota Public Utilities Commission in 1986 and has served three consecutive terms. He is currently chairman of the Electricity Committee of the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners (NARUC). He is past President of the Mid-American Regulatory Commissioners (MARC). And he has also served on the Advisory Board of the Electric Power Research Institute (EPRI). Jim and his wife, Bernice, raised five children on their family farm just east of Wessington Springs, SD.

Jonathan S. Adelstein was sworn in as a member of the Federal Communications Commission on December 3, 2002. Before joining the FCC, Adelstein served for fifteen years as a staff member in the United States Senate. For the last seven years, he was a senior legislative aide to United States Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle (D-SD), where he advised Senator Daschle on telecommunications, financial services, transportation and other key issues. Adelstein was born and raised in Rapid City, South Dakota. He now lives in the Washington, D.C. area with his wife Karen, son Adam and daughter Lexi.
