I'm not sure this is who I should be sending this to or if I even should bring it up but I'm going to and you can redirect me if you'd like.

There will be a pump station on ground that TransCanada bought from us if this happens. It is right next to a cemetery. One of my concerns was the noise from the pump. They told us the pumps weren't very loud. We wondered "compared to what" but we never really got much of an answer. We were willing to drive somewhere to heard how loud it was before we signed any papers but they didn't have any like what is suppose to be at this pump station. Which seems odd to me since building pipe lines and pump stations is what they do. Any way, they finally sent us a little letter saying they would plant trees around it or enclose the pump into a building if it was to loud during a funeral. Noting very official just a letter. Probably not worth any thing if it really comes down to it.

We had mixed emotions about the pipeline. Of course we would prefer if it didn't have to come through us or any where near us but we also understand it has to get transported some how. And I might not been against it if we had any idea who was going to own it. If it would be staying in our country or shipped off to someone who's trying to kill us. And with the money they've spent it seems like it would have been more cost effective if they just built a refinery where the oil is. Then that makes you wonder if it's not safe to do that either.

Any way. If you have time to reply to me to let me know that you received it I would appreciate it.

Thank you,
Carmen Heidler
