

and improvement or a route or site has not commenced within four years after the permit was issued, then the commission “shall suspend the permit,” and the permittee “shall certify to the commission that there have been no significant changes in any material aspects of the conditions or circumstances when the permit was issued.” Minn. R. Stat. 7850.4700 (emphasis added). South Dakota’s certification statute is materially different and does not require that there have been no significant changes in the circumstances since the permit was issued. Rather, Keystone must prove that any changes in circumstances do not affect its ability to meet the conditions on which the permit was granted.

3. Although Keystone has not asked that the Commission amend any of the conditions, it would be reasonable for the Commission to conclude that it has the inherent authority to amend the conditions of the permit. For instance, Condition No. 2 requires that Keystone comply with any conditions of the Final Environmental Impact Statement that might conflict with the permit conditions. It would be reasonable for the Commission to amend that condition to refer to the Final Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement given its issuance after the Amended Final Decision and Order, dated June 29, 2010. It would not be reasonable for the Commission to conclude, for the reasons argued in the motion, that instead of amending a condition like Condition No. 2, it would be required to deny Keystone’s certification even though Keystone is able to meet the conditions contained in the permit, which is what the Certification statute requires.

4. The Movants’ request that the Commission alternatively amend Finding of Fact No. 113 because Keystone failed to fulfill its statutory obligation to give due consideration to the views of governing bodies of all affected local units of government is without merit. First, as explained in discovery, Keystone considers the Yankton Sioux Tribe and the other tribes that have intervened to be sovereign nations, not “local units of government” within the meaning of SDCL § 49-41B-22. The Yankton Sioux Tribe did not intervene as a “local unit of government,” but as an interested party under SDCL § 49-41B-17. The Tribe described itself in its application for party status as a “sovereign government.” (Yankton Sioux Tribe Application for Party Status.) IEN does not claim to be a “local unit of government,” so the requested relief cannot apply to it.

5. Second, the Tribe’s unsupported contention that Keystone failed to consult with the Yankton Sioux Tribe is not true. Tribal “consultation” with respect to the Keystone XL project is the responsibility of the federal government, to be conducted on a government-to-government basis. Notwithstanding this, as explained in the affidavit of Lou Thompson, while not required, Keystone did engage with the Yankton Sioux Tribe. Even the Tribe’s application for party status acknowledges this by stating that tribal input is necessary “[a]fter the initial flawed tribal consultation.” (Yankton Sioux Tribe Application for Party Status.) If the Tribe has an issue with the adequacy of consultation, it should take that up with the State Department, not raise it here.

6. The contention that the Yankton Sioux Tribe’s “treaty territory and aboriginal lands would be directly crossed by the proposed route” (Motion at 4) is inaccurate. The Yankton Sioux Tribe filed claims with the Indian Claims Commission in 1951, pursuant to Section 2 of the Indian Claims Commission Act, 25 U.S.C. 70 et seq. In the course of extensive litigation between the Yankton Sioux Tribe and the United States, the Indian Claims Commission established the boundary of the Yankton Sioux’s claimed aboriginal lands. See The Yankton Sioux Tribe v The United States, 24 Ind. Cl. Comm. 208 (1970). The boundaries of the Tribe’s aboriginal land claims are legally described in an interlocutory order of the Indian Claims Commission in Docket No. 332-c. A copy is attached as Exhibit A. The starting point for the description is the point in the Missouri River where Hughes, Hyde, and Lyman Counties meet. The described territory is all east of that point; none of the aboriginal lands were located west of the Missouri River. A map showing the aboriginal lands is attached to an Opinion of the Commission, reported at 24 Ind. Cl. Comm. 208 (Dec. 14, 1970), and is attached here as Exhibit B. “In 1858, the Yankton Sioux entered into a treaty with the United States renouncing their claim to more than 11 million acres of their aboriginal lands in the north central plains.” South Dakota v. Yankton Sioux Tribe, 522 U.S. 329, 333 (1998). The retained Tribal land is located in the southeastern part of Charles Mix County, and encompasses approximately 430,000 acres. Id. at 334.

7. Finally, the Yankton Sioux Tribe could have intervened in docket HP09-001 if it wanted to contend that Keystone could not meet its burden of proof under SDCL § 49-41B-22. It did not. It cannot now belatedly attempt to inject that issue into the instant Certification proceeding. The adequacy of Keystone’s tribal consultation is not properly an issue before the Commission under SDCL § 49-41B-22.

8. The argument that Finding of Fact Number 114 should be amended because the Amended Final Decision & Order dated June 29, 2010, is not fully consistent with Keystone’s tracking table of changes is illogical for the same reasons identified in paragraph 2. It makes no sense to say that the Commission’s decision in 2010 was based on incomplete information due to facts known four years later. The Movants’ argument that the tracking table is an admission that “key bases for the Commission’s decision have been altered,” (Motion at 5), is entirely unsupported. As demonstrated by the certification petition and tracking table, Keystone remains able to meet the conditions on which the permit was granted despite the changes in fact. To the extent that the Movants disagree, their disagreement presents an issue for hearing, not a basis for the Commission to grant the motion.

Keystone respectfully requests that the motion be denied.

4. Pam Halvorson and Elliot Christensen attended the meeting on behalf of the Lower Brule Sioux Indian Community. Other interested persons attending representing a variety of tribes in the region.

5. In part the October 29, 2008, meeting was to encourage tribal historic preservation officers to identify culturally sensitive areas along the pipeline route and to encourage tribal participation in cultural surveys of the areas so identified.

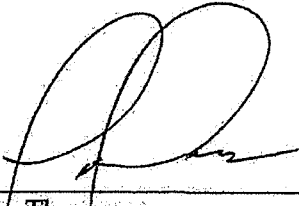

6. In April of 2009, following up on contacts made in 2008, Josh Chase of AECOM, an environmental consultant for Keystone, contacted Ms. Spotted Eagle to inquire about her views on culturally sensitive areas along the route. At the time, she had not identified any specific areas of cultural sensitivity.

7. In 2010 Keystone began conducting cultural surveys along the proposed XL route, using tribal monitors and observers as participants. In the summer of 2010 Yankton Sioux representatives attended and participated in various surveys relating to the route. Seven Yankton Sioux monitors were appointed for the purpose. Then Yankton Sioux Tribal Historic Preservation Officer Lana Gravatt attended some of the surveys and route studies.

8. All expenses incurred by Yankton Sioux members were paid by Keystone.

9. On August 4, 2010 the Yankton Sioux Tribe adopted a resolution opposing the construction of the Keystone XL project. A copy of the resolution is attached hereto, marked Exhibit A for reference. After the adoption of the resolution, Keystone, out of respect for the Yankton Sioux Tribe's decision, ended its efforts to work with the Tribe.
