Dear Commissioners and M Smith,

If businesses and companies are providing documents in multi-languages so that all can understand the information, why can you not put out notifications that can be understood by the general public, rather than as if you are corresponding with a team of lawyers? At least one of the people that was listed as being 'not accepted' due to living too far away, owns property along Punished Woman's Lake. Due to the intimidating verbiage of the notification that was sent out, I don't feel that he, or anyone else who may object to the reasons for them being eliminated, will request re-consideration. Add to this your excellent time frame of having the holiday weekend to take action...notice on Good Friday and meeting set for April 3rd (day after the holiday weekend), it feels like we, the people, are being run over by not only the wind company, but also by our own commissioners.

If there are only certain people that I am supposed to be allowed to talk or correspond with, and you are not one of those people, I do apologize. Diane Redlin
