

Has anyone thought about Wind Turbines causing climate change due to altering natural wind currents?

In the auto, medical, food, and farm industry products are put out even when they are known to have problems. Only after large numbers of people become sick and even die are recalls issued. Then investigations reveal that these problems were known. We know that there are health issues and concerns caused by wind turbines. Why do we have to wait for a catastrophe before anything is done?

I have noticed that there are no longer nesting Great horned owls on our land since the turbines.

There are three within a mile of our land. We were told by the original owner that there have always been a pair since they homesteaded this piece of land.

I have noticed a big drop in the squirrel pop and there are no ducks in the wet land that has lots of water this year. This spring the snow geese stayed to the South as they came from the Springfield area. I watched for years as they used to fly farther to the North before the turbines.

we know
wind turbines affect wildlife

Has our soon to be ex governor thought about our tourism and hunting industry?

These people spread money accross the whole state. Part of the S.D charm is our wide open spaces. A lot of bikes rumble down through the less traveled roads just to see this type of country I don't think they will be happy to see these turbines all over the place especially after going through Iowa & Minnesota. If they put turbines up in my favorite spots I will go else where and I'm not alone.

Your home is where you should feel your safest. When you get close to your home after work or from being gone you should get a peaceful feeling as you get closer to home. I no longer have that as I have to drive past a gap that reveals over a dozen spinning turbines by day and a red angry flashing red lights at night.

It's like running a gauntlet until I get to our yard and the trees block them out. With this new project ~~neither~~ neither us or our kids and grandkids who live on the farm with us will be able to hide from them. In the distance they make the ridge look like an abandoned waste site by day and a war zone at night with the red flashing lights.

then
I feel peaceful

~~In the end its all about~~

There are a lot of people that are against these turbines but they are afraid of losing business or friends so for now they are silent. Many don't like the fact that it's owned out of state and the power goes out of state. A Minn resident that was forced into some of the first turbines said they were told their electric rates would go way down. They have only gone up! In the end its all about a big company getting richer at the expense of the general public.
