Use Of Telephone For Debt Collection Purposes

The Federal Communications Commission has received information that interstate telephony being used for collection of claimed debts in ways that are or may be in violation of applicable telephone companies and criminal statutes. Practices alleged include calling at odd hours of the day or night; repeated calls; calls to friends, neighbors, relatives, employers, and children; a variety of threats; calls asserting falsely that credit ratings will be hurt; calls false legal process is about to be served; calls demanding payments for amounts not owed; calls of employment; and calls misrepresenting the terms and conditions of existing or proposed service. Although many of these calls are placed on a local basis, there is increasing indication that improper practices also involve use of interstate toll and Wide Area Telephone Service (WATS).

Tariffs of the telephone companies forbid use of the telephone "... for a call or calls, otherwise, if in a manner reasonably to be expected to frighten, abuse, torment, or harass for calls that "... interfere unreasonably with the use of the service by one or more other persons or calls for "... unlawful purpose." Upon violation of any of these conditions the telephone company, by written notice, discontinue service "forthwith." These tariff regulations are filed with the Commission pursuant to Section 203 of the Communications Act, 47 U.S.C. 203, and are binding on the telephone company and customer alike. Users of the telephone service are also subject to the enforcement proceedings provided for in Sections 401 and 411 of the Communications Act. In addition to the telephone service for violation of the tariffs, Section 223 of the Communications Act prohibits the use of the telephone in the District of Columbia or in interstate or foreign communication, "repeated telephone calls, during which conversation ensues, solely to harass any person or to knowingly permit "others to use his telephone" for such purpose. Penalties under Section 223 are a fine up to $500.00 or six months' imprisonment, or both, 47 U.S.C. 223.

The Commission is concerned that some users of telephone service may be unaware of their obligation to refrain from using the service for abusive or harassing calls. It is also concerned that some users may be willfully and repeatedly violating the provision of the tariffs and the applicable regulations that the telephone companies are not adequately enforcing their tariffs. Accordingly, the Commission is issuing this Public Notice in order that the public may be informed of the requirements and so that users may be alerted to their legal obligations in the use of the telephone and the penalties for failure to abide thereby.
