additional questions against Northwestern about the

I can't remember. Would --

MR. DIETRICH: That very well may be the case. I'm not as familiar with all the other companies' tariffs, but I don't believe we have specifically proposed anything under it.

VICE CHAIRMAN SAHR: And if we were kind of weighing the issue of precedence, would it be fair to say that most of the other companies and I don't know your practices, but most of the companies are using Contracts With Deviations to address these type of issues?

MR. DIETRICH: We have not had a Contract With Deviation proposed on the electric side of our business. I'm not certain -- I know Otter Tail has had Contracts With Deviations. Whether they're business development or other new customer or existing customer loads, I'm not those customers that are seeking a competitive electric bid and may not be willing to treat a conditional offer by us in the same fashion that they treat a firm offer from another supplier. But in the case if this tariff were approved, I think we would be comfortable indicating we would take the same approach as Black Hills and that would be to -- where it is workable with the customer to present this and the time frame is appropriate, we would present it to the Commission.

VICE CHAIRMAN SAHR: Well, and I'm going to ask a question that I think I asked at the last meeting to Mr. Jacobson, but how quickly do you think you can move on an expedited request?

MR. JACOBSON: From staff's point of view, again, it depends on the information supplied by the company at the time of the request. We've handled these in less than a week's time before. But, you know, we are also -- it was obvious from the company that they said they needed to offer -- make firm commitments within a period of a couple of hours, which obviously would give us no time to review anything.

VICE CHAIRMAN SAHR: Well, and I'm thinking back to the hearing that we had on the certain.

I'm not aware of what the other companies are doing, I guess.

VICE CHAIRMAN SAHR: And have you had any further discussions with staff about some type of expedited -- and I don't know if expedited is the right word because it sounds like from staff's indication at the last meeting that there would be a possibility to move relatively quickly on a Contract for Deviation. And someone calls you up and says I need a bid by 5 o'clock and it's 9 in the morning, that might be too fast, but I think most of these deals you have a longer period of time.

Have you had additional conversations with staff about that?

MR. DIETRICH: We have not talked with staff about that since the 26th of April. You know, I do believe that the process that Mr. White discussed for Black Hills sounds like a reasonable approach that in those circumstances where it is workable and working -- negotiating with the customer to present it to the Commission for approval, that we'd be willing to do that.

The difficult situation that we find is in Turkey Growers and it seemed to me in that case I realized there was some last-minute runs out to the golf course or whatever it was but it seemed to me that that was a rather lengthy negotiation process. And we can obviously notice a matter for hearing with 48 hours' notice so, I mean, I could potentially, like you said, see some process that I mean, Mr. Dietrich, in most situations wouldn't that give you adequate time to -- you're going to have to put together a bid, you're going to have to do this, do that. Aren't you having a little more lead time than just your typical Super Center Xes calling you up at 9 a.m. saying they want something at 5 o'clock?

MR. DIETRICH: In most cases we're going to have a certain period of time. In the case of Dakota Turkey Growers we were given about a two-day period. We had been negotiating with them giving them offers and talking with them. And then they came back and said, you know, we want an answer and we want it -- you know, within kind of a quick time period, and that's when we kind of had the mad rush to get the information to Mr. Rutladge.

So the circumstances that we're talking about case for Northwestern. It's South Dakota competing here isn't just adjoining utilities as has been the needs?

MR. DIETRICH: Well, I guess I'm not certain what you're asking. If you're asking for us to come forward and say we want the authority to when you discuss this. This is a major public policy decision, and to me it's almost legislative in nature, and part of me is kind of saying maybe you guys should take it back to the Legislature if you want to make sure -- I mean, we ratify this after the fact, make sure they want it going forward. Part of me almost thinks take a pass on this, so to speak.

But I don't even know if any of these people are going to intervene. I mean, it might just be Northwestern again. But at the very least then we can feel like we got adequate public input because I think you have the hard time making the argument that standing goes beyond probably just the rate payers of Northwestern.

And maybe I'm wrong on that. That's from suggestions from counsel. But I think it's a pretty broad policy decision, and, again, I think once the genie's out of the bottle it's going to be difficult to go back and say, okay, Otter Tail, you can't do this, NorthWestern, you can, Xcel, you don't want to do it, Black Hills, you like doing it, and so on and so forth.

And certainly nobody wants to do anything that's going to harm Northwestern's ability to

And we would not object to that input, certainly not from other regulated utilities who might have pros and cons to present with regard to this approach. And certainly if they are considering it, it may give the Commission an opportunity to have their input before it decides on the first application.

MR. RISLOV: Commissioner Hanson, could I take another stab at addressing Commissioner Johnson's question? This is Greg Rislov.

CHAIRMAN HANSON: Please, Greg. MR. RISLOV: I perhaps wasn't as clear as I should have been. The tariff I was discussing would talk about recovery of fuel and variable cost of serving that customer.

Now we do have tariffs that look a lot like that. And essentially what that means is the utility is going to recover its fuel cost and if you continue reading on, most of those tariffs will say that there's not a firm or a hard and fast floor on the recovery of other costs. And the reason why --

And if I could go back in the history, and I'll try not to go back 29 years, is that when we compete, but we're probably talking about a matter of a few weeks or a couple months at tops if we can open up the process to more public input. And if people don't come in and give any public input and be silent, I think that probably speaks on Northwestern's behalf that maybe it's not as controversial as we think it is.

Or you never know. Maybe someone's going to come in and say we like Northwestern's plan. It's going to give us the ability to attract more businesses, which I think in whole we'd all like to see that as long as it doesn't happen at the expense of the rate payers.

MR. DIETRICH: I guess Northwestern would be the one who would potentially object to someone else providing public information at a -- you know, a future meeting with regard to this docket if we left this open, we certainly could, you know, recommend that if we could put this perhaps on the Commission's next agenda, which I guess that meeting's two weeks out or if you wanted to provide more time for public input, set it at the meeting after that and then allow the interested parties to come forward, at this time I have no objection to that type of an approach.

talk about Black Hills and Otter Tail and MidAmerican and for that matter Xcel and Northwestern, we've always trusted these utilities to do what was in the best interest of their customers. We understood that they had such few -so few opportunity to actually pull in a big load, and we knew that big load could help the residential customers.

On the other hand, we were concerned that if we didn't approve these tariffs -- oh, I'm not going to come in with all the potential problems of not approving tariffs. I mean, there could be some risk for the utility coming in the next rate case or it could be a risk for the Commissioners. There's no public hearing when we get into all of those issues.

But, frankly, once we approve that tariff that says basically fuel cost plus, please, gentlemen, use your best judgment on the margin above that, to me that is a filed tariff. They can go out and negotiate, and they can come in after the negotiation's done and show us that that does meet with that tariff.

So essentially that to me is not only all the freedom the utility would want -- they're

And, honestly, I don't recall ever rejecting one of those when -- and I'll name the utility, when Black Hills comes with that kind of a filing. Now was that pursuant to the tariff that essentially having the same kind of formula that the Commission could then review at the next rate

I guess my concern -- and I haven't been through a rate case so part of my concern may be certainly from inexperience, but it seems I'm somewhat uncomfortable -- not completely, but somewhat uncomfortable with saying that it might be 15 years down the road before the Commission would have any authority to be able to, you know, really review and have any impact on contract

Do you have anything -- are my concerns well placed, or do you have anything that may alleviate

MR. DIETRICH: Well, I think, you know, we've done -- we've presented to staff in this Docket a proposed analysis that we'd undertake before we would make the determination of what we're willing to offer the customer. And in making that determination, you know, we are coming to a conclusion that our cost to provide the customer our coverage and that there is some margin for the other customers, if we don't file a rate case for let's say 10 years -- I don't think that's likely,

Mr. Dietrich has referred to? Not really. I don't know if -- I won't even get into the history of that tariff. That was kind of an odd duck from my point of view, but it's a Contract with Deviations type of thing, or it's a filed tariff that specifies that floor.

I just think there's a lot of freedom with that, and it covers the risk I think for all parties if it's done in that manner.

I apologize for being so long. That's just kind of my view on this. I don't know if that helped or not.

CHAIRMAN HANSON: Thank you, Greg. Commissioner Johnson, do you have any questions? COMMISSIONER JOHNSON: Yes, Mr. Dietrich, how long has it been since

Northwestern's last rate case on the electric side? MR. DIETRICH: I believe Northwestern's last electric rate case was in the mid 1980s.

COMMISSIONER JOHNSON: Mr. Dietrich, you sort of -- it seems as though you were kind of asking the question -- when I was asking about preapproval it sort of seemed like you were saying, well, what is the difference between preapproval or but if we don't file a rate case for 10 years, if we have a revenue shortfall from serving that customer, the company absorbs that shortfall. We're not asking the other customers to make it up.

In fact, our existing tariff, one of the tariffs we're adding specifically says in no way should other customers suffer a detriment or a cost because of our service to this customer.

So, you know, what you would be determining in the rate case is the company's overall revenue requirement and in the test period during that test period did, in fact, the company -- should the company have selected more from this customer? In other words, would the Commission impute the level of revenue above what the company actually received in determining the company's overall revenue requirements?

For all periods prior to that test period if the company should have collected more, the company's at risk. During the test period the company has the burden of proof. The company does not meet that burden of proof, the Commission could impute additional revenues. Thereby, providing less additional revenues, the company would need to gain in the rate increase filing -- you know, if

I think that the really -- the company is . correct that for -- it's hard to tell unless you have absolute numbers and absolute evidence is presented in a rate case, but there really -- the circumstance would be normally that the customer is 24 protected until the next rate case and at that circumstances for everybody.

And I'm paraphrasing what I understand Kyle to say and I think Northwestern would also be. Is that correct, Mr. White?

MR. WHITE: Yes, Alan, that is correct and realistically what our tariff does is it provides us flexibility to compete for new loads, be creative on behalf of our customers who need creative solutions, and it isn't a methodology for us necessarily to avoid the Commission at all

The problem with the rule-making, of. course, is it's very difficult to turn something like that around in a couple of weeks. In fact, it's impossible.

CHAIRMAN HANSON: Thank you, John. Anything further?

COMMISSIONER JOHNSON: Mr. Chairma I would move that we postpone action on this until the next Commission meeting so that the Commissioners can receive legal advice from General Counsel about how to proceed.
