350.org is building a globalgrassroots movement to fight climate change. Our online campaigns, grassroots organizing, and mass public actions are coordinated by a global network active in over 188 countries, and all 50 states including South Dakota. The number 350 means climate safety to preserve a livable planet, scientists tell us we must reduce the amount of CO2 in the atmosphere from its current level of 400 parts per million to below 350ppm. To have a reasonable chance of getting back to 350 scientists say we need to leave 80% of known fossil fuel reserves in the ground, including the Alberta tar sands. Permitting Keystone XL would mean a dramatic growth in the exploitation of the tar sands, and so we believe it is necessary for us to intervene in the Commission's discussion of TransCanada's permit.
