To whom this may concern,

My name is Paul Soulek and I am the President of the South Dakota Aviation Association (SDAA). I would like to express my concerns for the addition of more wind turbines in central South Dakota and throughout our state.

Not all land owners in farming areas that are selected for future wind turbine sites are in favor of the turbines. One major concern is losing the ability to have their crops sprayed by air. This could result in disease or insects present in their crops. Generations of farms have relied on aerial application to help protect the health of their crops. Farming has been the top economic source in the area for previous and future generations and their concerns should be validated.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Paul Soulek
