As I looked at me with a look something akin to "Was Mama joking? My mouth opened with a question I shouldn't quite bring to the table. I continued to bab-

"Are you even talking to me now?" he asked firmly.

It's when I had to conceal the reality that, in fact, I managed to make it four months without knowing what a lemming actually was.

A shameful lapse in knowledge of this type of information is easily accessible with the technological advances of Wikipedia and I had to tell the kids that lemmings are a type of rodent that lives on the tundra and that they do not swim in snow pack instead of being infinitely not tiny mon-

Where I got the idea that they were in the primate family, I do not know, but my search revealed that the only other thing I thought I knew about lemmings -- that they purposefully and regularly jump en masse to their deaths -- was also untrue. The origin myth of lemmings' lethal cliff diving behavior, I soon learned, is in fact quite shocking. Apparently, Disney produced a series of nature documentaries in the 1950s and one of them featured a segment using faked footage of lemmings jumping into the ocean. In reality, the lemmings were not acting of their own volition, but were forced over the cliff by the humans filming them. While lemmings will attempt to swim when migrating to find food, and do sometimes drown, it is accidental, not intentional. Yet the idea that lemmings are suicidal persists to this day. Such is the power of well-crafted misinformation.

The whole episode reminds me of how much I had to un-learn about rural life when I first moved to South Dakota. There were many preconceived notions and anecdotal half-truths I'd picked up from books and movies over the years that I discovered bore little resemblance to the reality of living closer to the land. My homesteader fantasies were just that -- fantasy.

That does not mean the reality of this lifestyle was a disappointment. The shift from urban to rural came with many blessings, and not the least of them was a dose of humility -- it was good to be reminded at that point in my adulthood how much I didn't know, and it continues to be helpful to this day. I am better for being humbled by my inexperience.

This week also marks the start of lambing for our flock, and was a chance to learn again, another, much harsher, lesson. As of this writing, one baby has already been born and died, its body malformed, unable to draw a single breath. What a way to begin, and yet, as I've shared in this column before, confronting death regularly is part of ranching.

And that's the other blessing that I struggle even now to accept: There's so much more uncertainty and loss inherent in human experience than modernity acknowledges or prepares us for, but prepare we must, lest we spend all our time trying to avoid the inevitable truth that life is sometimes brutal.

So, friends, let's do the best we can to remain open to all we don't yet know, and all we may never know. There is a comfort to be found in stripping back the armor of our misconceptions -- the shield of certainty that separates us from the tenderness we all knew as children, when the world was fresh as the prairie in spring, and just as wide and green.

Eligible subscribers will receive a Lifeline credit up to $9.25 (dependent on service selected).

Qualifying programs are: Medicaid, Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), and Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Federal Public Housing Assistance (FPHA) award letter, Veterans Pension or Survivors Benefit Programs.

HOW DO I APPLY?

Visit www.lifelinesupport.org to see the full list of accepted documents.

OTHER INFORMATION TO KNOW:

For broadband services to qualify, the service level must be 20 Mbps download and 3 Mbps upload or the best available to you. The Lifeline discount is available for one telephone or service per household, which is defined as any individual or group of individuals who live together at the same address and share income and expenses. Lifeline service is not transferable, and only eligible consumers may enroll in the program. If you move or become ineligible it is your responsibility to notify your service provider within 30 days. Consumers who willfully make false statements to obtain Lifeline service can be punished by fine or imprisonment and can be barred from the program.

PAY-PER-CALL BILLING RIGHTS

Some companies offer a variety of informational services using phone numbers beginning with 900. There is usually a charge for calls to these numbers. The price and content of these services are established by the companies providing the information.

For 900 billing disputes or inquiries, please call your local telephone company. You have 60 days from the date of the bill to dispute a 900 billing error review. You have the right to withhold payment of the disputed 900 charges during the billing error review. No collection activity for disputed 900 charges will occur while the charges are under investigation. After investigation, if it is determined that the disputed 900 charges are legitimate, the long distance company, or the information provider, may proceed with outside collections against your account for nonpayment of these charges. Your local and long distance service cannot be disconnected for nonpayment of 900 charges. Failure to pay legitimate 900 charges may result in involuntary blocking of access to 900 services. Voluntary blocking of access to 900 services is available upon request from your local telephone company.

internet service!

An important message from your community-based telecom provider

Your community-based telecom provider is pleased to offer Lifeline service — providing discounted telephone or internet service for eligible consumers.

The Lifeline Universal Service Program is a government supported program available to qualified, low-income consumers and offers a discount for eligible services. Eligible services include telephone and internet service (the latter as of December 2, 2016). If you are an existing telephone service subscriber receiving the monthly Lifeline discount, you can continue to apply that discount to your home or cell phone voice service. But you can only receive a discount on ONE option — telephone or internet.

How to Qualify for a Lifeline Discount

You must participate in at least one of the following programs to be eligible for a Lifeline Program discount:

- Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP)
- Supplemental Security Income (SSI)
- Medicaid
- Federal Public Housing Assistance
- Veterans Pension and Survivors Benefit Program
- Bureau of Indian Affairs General Assistance
- Tribally-administered Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TTANF)
- Food Distribution Program on Indian Reservations (FDPIR)
- HEAD Start
- Income Below the Federal Poverty Guideline

If you signed up for a Lifeline discount through the National School Lunch Program, Temporary Assistance for Needy Families, Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, or any other state-run program, your phone or internet provider may ask you to confirm your enrollment in one of the above, eligible programs when they do your next eligibility confirmation.

Services Eligible for the Lifeline Discount

Lifeline telephone and internet services will have to provide certain minimum features. Lifeline-discounted services must offer at least:

- 500 minutes per month for cell phone voice plans
- 500 MB per month at 3G speeds for cell phone data plans
- 150 GB per month at 10/1 download/upload speeds for home internet plans

Exception: In those areas where the provider does not offer speeds at or above 10/1 download/upload, they must provide the highest performing, generally available home internet plans, which must be at least 4/1 download/upload.

Changing Companies

If you decide to apply your monthly Lifeline discount to either home internet service or a data plan for your cell phone, you must remain with the company that provides your service for at least 12 months. After that, you are free to switch to a different company. If you move to a different state or to an area where your company does not offer service, let your company know. They will guide you through the process of changing companies.

If you sign up for new home or cell phone voice service, you need to stay with your company for at least 2 months. If you choose to apply your discount to a bundle, ask the company which change policy applies.
